Richard Norris Williams Easy Victor Over Francis T. Hunter in Nassau Club Tennis Final

Former National Title Holder Triumphs by 6-1, 6-1, 6-1

Sensational Service Proves Most Formidable Weapon in Easy Victory; Hunter Is Completely Baffled by Speed and Accuracy of Williams's Delivery

By Fred Hawthorne

Playing with burning speed, deadly accuracy and a daring that held no chance too great, Richard Norris Williams 2d, former national champion, crushed Francis T. Hunter under a score of 6-1, 6-1, 6-1, yesterday afternoon, in the final round of the Nassau Country Club's annual invitation lawn tennis tournament at Glen Cove, L. I.

Williams reeled off his amazing nts and games so rapidly that the atch was all over in less than forty minutes from the time the men first ok the court.

And afterward, in the locker room, inter still seemed stunned at the mpleteness of his defeat. "How did happen?" he inquired of a friend.

And the only thing you could say in swer to this appeal from Hunter is that Williams had been playing ally unbeatable tennis. When Dick feated Maurice McLoughlin, in the ial round of the national championip on the center court at Newport, in 14, he amazed the gallery by the same

1914, he amazed the gallery by the same display of super-tennis. It was his service that formed Wil-liams's most formidable attacking liams's most formidable attacking weapon yesterday, if I am to pick out any one concrete example of his winning strokes from among such a brilliant array. During the short three sets that the match lasted the former national champion scored a total of ten actual service aces, but in addition the speed and uncanny accuracy of his delivery forced Hunter into twenty-two off service, nineteen "nets" and in his ability to make a good showing at least, and perhaps to do better than that. Had any one told him that he would get only three games in the whole match I doubt that Hunter could have restrained a hearty laugh of incredulity, and yet that was the limit of his success.

Williams used his wire-strung steel racquet, as he has done since last winter, and William A. Larned, inventor of the metal novelty, who stood by the court and watched Williams riding rough-shod over the determined Hunter, remarked after the last point had been finished off: "That was absolutely the fastest tennis, on Williams's part, that I have ever seen."

This is high praise indeed from

Rain Falls During Last Set

It was the magic of Williams's play that proved the magnet yesterday. The gallery seemed to feel that a drenching by a summer rain was of no consequence when compared with the delight of watching the super-stroking of the former national title holder. Provided Williams can bring that same brand of tennis to Germantown with him next September it is difficult to imagine any man in the world defeating him.

September it is difficult to imagine any man in the world defeating him.

Rarely have I seen a more courageous, stoic gallery than that at Nassau yesterday. The women, dressed in light summer costumes, remained in their seats, many without protection of any kind, not only through the playing of the singles match, but also through the three sets of the final round doubles match, in which Williams and Watson M. Washburn defeated Frank T, and Fred C. Anderson by a score of 6-4, 6-3, 6-3.

Williams started the service in the first set, with E. C. Conlin presiding in the umpire's chair. Chairman Martin, in keeping with the uniform excellence of management that had marked his work throughout the tournament, had provided a full complement of capable linesmen and everything was run off according to the tennis Hoyle.

Almost withon an effort Williams took the first three games. His service proved practically unreturnable, Hunter finding the net eight times and driving out of court once, in his efforts to score. The indoor champion scored his only game in the fourth when he won his own service, the result of one service ace and two "nets" and an "out" by Williams.

The Davis Cup star reeled off the next three games with the loss of only 2 points, giving him the set at 6-1. Hunter started service in the second set and won, but that was his bid, for Williams ran the next six games in a row, for the second set.

Hunter was having a bit more success in handlling his opponent's returns, yet his position was absolutely hopeless. Williams was scoring on dazzling passing shots as Hunter attempted to reach the volleying position, and when the New York player sent back his defensive returns, Williams was down on the ball like a hawk, smothering it with brilliant volleying shots, angled so acutely that Hunter was caught far short of position.

Hunter Wins Fourth Game

The story was much the same in the last set, except that now Williams increased the force of his attack, and was winning a majority of his points on clean earning shots, not on Hunter's errors. Hunter won the fourth game on his own service, and that was all, al-though he forced Williams into two "deuce" in the last two sessions of play.

In the doubles match Williams and In the doubles match Williams and Washburn were always superior to the Anderson brothers as a team, but there were periods when Frank Anderson more than held his own with the Davis Cup players, volleying and driving with lightning speed. Williams did not put the same amount of intensity into his play that he had shown in the singles. Fred Anderson, after a good start, slowed up considerably later, and was the weak point on his side of the net.

Miss Adeline Gehrig, of the New York Turn Verein, and Miss Rose Fisher, of the Bayonne A. A., scored double victories in the open A. A. RICHMOND COUNTY
Young Lucien Walker had a merry day of it at his home club, Richmond County, yesterday. He saved the Henry J. Miller trophy for the club while winning his first leg on the cup in a competition of thirty-six holes, best selected score for eighteen. T. W. Fowler, winner of the cup in 1920 and 1921, was well on his way toward winning his third leg and permanent possession of the prize. He had two rounds of 77 each, giving him a selected score of 71. The tally looked extremely handsome until Walker arrived with a selected score of 68 from rounds of 77 and 73.
